Professional Summary: Anne Sisson Runyan, PhD in International Relations, is Professor of Political Science and a faculty affiliate of Women's, Gender, and Sexuality Studies (WGSS) at the University of Cincinnati (UC). She directs the Political Science doctoral concentration in Feminist Comparative and International Politics, formerly headed the Department of Women's Studies, and served as the Interim Faculty Chair and Director of the Taft Research Center at UC. She previously founded and directed women's studies programs at the State University of New York (SUNY) at Potsdam and at Wright State University (WSU) where she held tenured appointments in political science and chaired the SUNY Potsdam Politics Department. She has also taught in Canada and Europe, including serving as a Fulbright Visiting Research Chair in North American Integration at York University in Toronto and a visiting scholar and fellow at the University of Amsterdam, and studied and guest-lectured in many parts of the world. A pioneer in the field of feminist international relations and a recipient of the Eminent Feminist IR Scholar Award from the Feminist Theory and Gender Studies Section of the International Studies Association, her books include Global Gender Politics, Global Gender Issues (4 editions), Gender and Global Restructuring (2 editions, third in progress), and Feminist (Im)Mobilities in Fortress(ing) North America and she has published widely in the fields of feminist world politics and transnational feminisms. She serves on a range of editorial boards and was an associate editor of the International Feminist Journal of Politics for which she organized and hosted its fifth annual conference. In addition to her experience leading a major humanities research center funded by a substantial endowment yielding a $1.3 million annual budget as well as four academic departments and programs offering graduate and undergraduate degrees, she has been a leader in several professional organizations, including the International Studies Association (ISA), the National Women's Studies Association (NWSA), and the American Association of University Professors (AAUP). She has also won multiple external and internal grants; completed a $1.5 million capital campaign for Women's Studies; directed or co-directed several collaborative research, international exchange, curricular, and conference projects; and chaired and/or served on countless campus and faculty union governance bodies. She has taught a range of graduate and undergraduate courses particularly in the areas of feminist global political economy and security studies, feminist political and international relations theory, and transnational feminism at multiple institutions as well as chaired and/or served on many MA and PhD committees. For her achievements as a feminist researcher, administrator, organizer, and mentor, she has received numerous internal and external awards.

ACADEMIC ADMINISTRATION AND UNIVERSITY/COLLEGE/DEPT SERVICE

8/12-7/13

Interim Taft Faculty Chair/Director, Charles Phelps Taft Research Center,

University of Cincinnati

Responsibilities included leading this major humanities research center, founded in the 1930 and funded by a Taft family endowment yielding a $1.3 million annual budget which supports faculty and student research and scholarship in thirteen humanities, social science, and interdisciplinary departments largely within the College of Arts & Sciences; chairing the Taft Executive Board and liaising with the Taft Board of Trustees, the College of Arts & Sciences, community members, and other humanities centers nationwide; ensuring the formation of Taft award committees and the granting of allocated and competitive awards in multiple categories ranging from faculty and student conference travel and research awards to department lecture awards, faculty and doctoral fellowships, and awards for research seminars and groups, visiting scholars, library collections, and publications and external grant support; organizing annual symposium and other special events; fostering additional fundraising and external grant writing; proposing and administering the budget; supervising one staff member and four graduate assistants and physical facilities of the Taft House; and organizing the move to new quarters for the Center and the hire of an additional full-time staff member.

9/01-9/08

Head/Director, Department of/Center for Women's Studies, University of Cincinnati (also Graduate Director of Department 2006-2008 and 2011-2012)

Responsibilities included heading one of oldest Women's Studies programs in the nation (founded in 1974 as a Center, becoming a Department in 2005), which I expanded to include 6 fully appointed faculty (including an endowed chair), 6 joint appointments, and almost 100 affiliate faculty across many departments and colleges, 9 graduate assistants, an administrative assistant and 3-4 work study students, serving an average of 30 graduate and 70 undergraduate students per year in its degree programs and up to 2,000 students per year through its own and cross-listed courses; developing and revising curricula, which includes an M.A. (since 1991), the first joint M.A./J.D. (since 1995), a graduate certificate (since 1990s), and a freestanding undergraduate major and minor (as of 2003 to replace undergraduate certificate since 1970s) with concentrations in transnational feminism and sexuality studies; winning the grant for and directing a 5-year FIPSE-funded project on "Women's Human Rights, Identities, and Citizenship: Women's Studies in a North American Context" that links US, Canadian, and Mexican Women's Studies programs for student and faculty exchanges; working closely, as member of the Board, with the Friends of Women's Studies (the oldest community support group of its kind founded in 1980 that averaged 300 donors) to sustain annual giving and to continue building (after the completion of a successful capital campaign in 2004) the Department's over $1.5 million endowment that funds an endowed chair and other support programs; creating and conferring student, faculty, and Friends awards; organizing colloquia and visiting speakers; serving on multiple Women's Studies committees; recruiting, through chairing all search committees, and supervising and evaluating faculty; continuously revising governance documents, print publicity, and website; administering budget; and seeking internal and external grants. Additionally served as Local Program Chair of the 2008 National Women's Studies Association Annual Conference in Cincinnati, making the department of the lead host and organizer. As also Graduate Director between 2006-2008, oversaw graduate program, including graduate admissions, funding allotments, graduate assistant assignments and supervision, graduate proseminars and research proposals, graduate internships, and graduate advising, and conducted graduate program review. As Graduate Director during 2011-12 (under the department's new name, approved in 2008), continued to engage in the above graduate directing duties, including conducting another graduate review, while also totally revamping the curriculum and program materials for the university's conversion from quarters to semesters in Fall 2012 as well as mentoring graduate students to apply for funding from the Charles P. Taft Research Center, of which my department became a full member in 2010 after groundwork I laid, making it eligible for all faculty, student, and department enhancement funding offered by this endowed center. Also co-created three more dual degree programs (WGSS MA/PhDs with English, Philosophy, and Political Science) and worked with the Center for Race, Gender, and Social Justice in the UC College of Law that offers additional opportunities for our MA/JD students.
