FULL REPORT

During the last year, ISA Headquarters received, and referred to our committee, four formal complaints. These complaints were received on April 5, 2018; April 10, 2018; May 21, 2018; and October 5, 2018. Three of the cases involved the same set of individuals and three of them focused on behavior during the annual meeting (March 2018, San Francisco). Three of the cases were considered under the old Code of Conduct and one was considered under the new Code, which was adopted at the 2018 annual meeting. The latter case was reviewed by an ad hoc committee under the tenets of the new Code of Conduct. In addition, we considered two appeals of committee decisions. One was an appeal of a decision that our committee reached and one was an appeal of a decision arrived at by the previous committee. A final case was seemingly filed, but then withdrawn after some clarification about the nature of the dispute.

The committee began its consideration of these complaints and appeals almost immediately. We gathered information on these complaints, discussed whether the Committee (and the ISA generally) had jurisdiction regarding some of the issues raised in them, and deliberated the merits of the complaints. As the Code of Conduct specifics, the committee also forwarded the materials related to the complaints to the Executive Committee. The Executive Committee and PRR completed their deliberations, and shared their determinations with the complainants and respondents.
