Welcome from the Program Chair

I welcome you all to the 2016 annual ISA-Midwest conference. We have several exciting panels on a range of important international studies topics such as alliances, gender and politics, human rights, international and domestic conflicts, economic sanctions, international governance, and foreign policy analysis. This year’s program also includes several exciting roundtables and professional development opportunities. With generous support from the ISA Professional Development Committee, we have created a new program, called the Emerging Scholar Forum. This is similar to the Junior Scholar Symposium at ISA, and it places four groups of emerging scholars with a senior person in the field. There are also several roundtables. One of them honors Excellence in Mentoring and Teaching Award Recipient Cooper Drury (University of Missouri), while others cover keys for getting published, text analysis and authoritarian regimes, and advantages and disadvantages of online education. I hope you have the time to attend and take advantages of these exciting roundtables and regular panels in the program.

ISA President T.V. Paul (McGill University) will give the keynote address, “The Accommodation of Rising Powers in World Politics,” at the reception on Friday evening. We have several award winners listed in the program below. We will announce and honor them at the reception on Friday evening. All are welcome to attend. Marijke Breuning is the Quincy Wright Distinguished Scholar this year and will deliver an address, titled “Thinking about the Future of International Studies,” at the Quincy Wright luncheon on Saturday. Please note that only participants registered with the luncheon option can attend this event.

I would like to recognize and thank our sponsors for their generous support. Our sponsors this year include: Active Learning in International Affairs Section (ISA); Department of Political Science (University of Memphis); Department of Political Science (University of Missouri); Foreign Policy Analysis Journal; Foreign Policy Analysis Section (ISA); School of Politics and Global Studies (Arizona State University); Scientific Study of International Processes Section (ISA).

Special thanks to my graduate assistants Bimal Adhikari, Sam Dharia, Rachel Dicke, Jin Mun Jeong, Myunghhee Lee, Brandon Park, Payel Sen, and Emir Yazici for working the registration table. I am also grateful to Moises Arce, Cooper Drury, and Tom Guarrieri for help and support with the organization of the conference. Dursun Peksen (University of Memphis), the current ISA-Midwest president, has been supportive and a great help with different aspects of the conference. Finally, Liz Fausett-Fuhrman and Jeanne White at ISA Headquarters offered significant assistance and guidance during the conference preparation, while Abbie Keenoy of the Hilton Ballpark was very helpful in dealing with hotel coordination.

Have a great and productive conference!

Stephen L. Quackenbush

The Quincy Wright Distinguished Scholar Award is given annually to an individual who has significantly influenced international studies scholarship in the ISA-Midwest region. The Quincy Wright Award honors a professor with an exceptional record of scholarship and a distinguished record of service to the International Studies Association, ISA-Midwest, and to other international affairs organizations. This year’s winner is Marijke Breuning of the University of North Texas.

Dr. Breuning will deliver the keynote address on Saturday during the Quincy Wright luncheon. She also wished to form a roundtable on Keys for Getting Published (SC 03).

Marijke Breuning is Professor of Political Science at the University of North Texas. She previously taught at Truman State University and at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville. She earned her PhD at the Ohio State University. She specializes in foreign policy decision making, with a specific interest in development cooperation and small states, as well as the politics of international children’s rights (and especially intercountry adoption), women/gender and politics, and the sociology of the profession. She has published more than forty refereed journal articles, twelve book chapters, and three books. Her article, “The Politics of Intercountry Adoption: Explaining Variation in the Legal Requirements of Sub-Saharan African Countries,” co-authored with John Ishiyama, was the recipient of American Political Science Association’s 2010 Heinz Eulau Award for the best article published in Perspectives on Politics in 2009.

She recently served as editor of the American Political Science Review (2012-2016). Previously, she served as a member of the inaugural editorial team of Foreign Policy Analysis (2005-2009), co-editor of the Journal of Political Science Education (2005-2012), and book review editor of International Politics (2000-2003). She serves – or has served – on several editorial boards and in various leadership positions in the International Studies Association and American Political Science Association.
ISA Midwest Awards: Nominations for any of the following awards may be submitted via email to Stephen Quackenbush (quackenbushs@missouri.edu) by December 31, 2016.

Our award-winning faculty’s mission is to create and disseminate knowledge through undergraduate instruction, graduate training, research, and community outreach.

Focused on American politics, comparative politics, international relations, and public policy, MU political science faculty provide a rich and diverse set of theoretical and methodological perspectives that give our master’s and doctoral students state-of-the-art training.

Political science students learn directly from the people who create the knowledge and insights about politics through their research. This first-hand information puts our students into cutting-edge classes—there simply is no better way to receive a university education.

Political Science Program

The mission of the Political Science program is to equip students with a broad understanding of the principle underlying political systems, both in the United States and abroad, and to hone their skills of written expression, oral communication and critical thinking.

Students are prepared for careers in government, business and the legal profession, and are given the tools of effective leadership. Students are also encouraged to use the B.A. as a base degree upon which they can pursue advances degrees.

M.A. and J.D./M.A. programs are offered well-rounded curriculum, national visibility, and a 10 to 1 student to faculty ratio.

For more information, visit http://www.memphis.edu/polisci/
Arizona State University’s School of Politics and Global Studies’ main goal is to develop innovative approaches to major emerging challenges, based on transdisciplinary perspectives to the greatest extent possible.

The Political Science B.A., B.S., M.A. and Ph.D. and Global Studies B.A. programs emphasize research that links theory with real world issues and action through policy.

SPGS faculty is regularly published in leading academic journals and presses; serve on the editorial boards of major journals; have held internationally and nationally competitive fellowships and grants from institutions such as the National Science Foundation, the Guggenheim, Ford, Rockefeller, and MacArthur Foundations, and the Hoover Institution National Fellows Program. Faculty regularly advise domestic and international agencies, such as the U.S. State Department and the World Bank, and are at the table at major policy events nationally and globally.

The SPGS M.A. and Ph.D. programs in Political Science are designed to provide a well-grounded foundation in research methods and substantive content along with the opportunity to craft a program of study that meets individual interests.

There is a particular strength in campaigns and elections, ethnic and religious conflict, women and politics, and human rights in the programs. The diverse and distinguished faculty has strong commitments to excellence in research, teaching, and working with our graduate students. The program offers one of the best student to faculty ratios in the nation, approximately 2:1.
