49th Annual Conference
3-4 November 2017

Planetary Transformations: Contingency, Unpredictability, and Complexity in World Politics

Providence, RI
Hilton Providence
Special Events: Friday, November 3

Presidential Luncheon and Address, North Rosemore, 12:45-2:00 pm

“Diversity in the International Studies Profession”

Professor Brett Ashley Leeds, Rice University
ISA President

Women currently make up 42% of ISA’s membership, and yet even as women come closer to parity in numbers in our profession, there is evidence of inequity in such factors as promotions, publications, citations, teaching evaluations, and awards. Speaking primarily from lived experience, I will discuss several potential explanations for these observed outcomes and suggest some policies we can adopt individually and collectively to help address the underrepresentation of women. I argue that promoting diversity requires more than openness to inclusion, but also a willingness to change culture, policies, and processes. Doing this makes our profession better.

This luncheon has been arranged for those conference attendees who registered for the luncheon in advance online. (Name badges will have a “luncheon” marker in the bottom right corner.)
